"all things must pass" is the thought sadly prevalent in our minds at the end of the school year. but even with the passing of time and experiences, there will always be an outstanding figure in school life to whom students may turn for help and advice. the enumerated distinctions of this man could fill pages of this yearbook. every student at giles could relate an instance in which he has been of service to them. but to do so would be useless, even presumptuous. his personality speaks for him. In respect, the annual staff proudly dedicates the 1972 shield to james d. worley.

she smiled up at him, shyly, at first,
then she grinned at him outright, as if there were no reason to hide this thing they both felt.
it was a moment, filled with the greatest wonder.
“the big dance of the year is coming up soon,”
is what he said to her.
she knew that he’d ask her, all her friends
had told her so.
she spent days in anxious wonder, thinking, “oh, what will i say?”
but the time was here, and she wished to hold it to her forever, knowing hopelessly, it would soon pass.
she’d give him her answer,
which he knew would be “yes!”
all his friends had told him so.
their first dance together, it too would soon pass.
but they would hold it in their hearts,
a special moment, now gone.

big blue rebuilds under new coaches

first row — david stewart, buck anderson, randy stephens, jay butler, buzz johnston, rick ballard, ricky taylor, freddie fields, leslie williams. second row — coach kincaid, miles hylton, marvin fletcher, george hughes, geoffrey allen, doug pearson, gene jackson, teddy neely, chuck parcell, coach price. third row — paul lilly, mgr., mike lucas, doug dean, greg kanode, jimmy ellis, tom robinson, edgar moser, lyle griggs.

under new coaches and with only 7 returning starters, the spartans of giles ended the season with a 3-5-3 record. the spartan's new head coach is al kincaid, former va. tech player. bob price, also in his first year at giles, is the assistant coach. with the players returning next year, and with excellent material up from the j.v., the big blue looks to the future with optimism.

behind a tenacious defense and a precise, machine-like offense, the j.v.'s of giles rode to a highly successful 6-1 record. the season was highlighted by 2 wins over narrows and by the victory over previously undefeated pulaski. the spartans look to be tough in the future.

the 8th grade grabbed a share of the district championship by completing the year with a 6-0-1 slate. the offense was seldom stopped, the team having to punt only once all year. the defense was the real hero, however, yielding no points and very little yardage. the single blemish was a 0-0 tie with christiansburg.

Rick also set a district single game scoring record with 47 points against Floyd.

under the able leadership of coach o'brien, the giles 8th grade basketball team compiled a 4-4 season record that featured two wins over narrows. the team was well-balanced and many players gained experience that will be valuable to next year's j.v. team.

the sounds of laughter fill the hallways.
footsteps — walking, sliding, running.
then the last student clears into the classroom,
and there is silence,
the lull after a storm.

the storm will break again,
confusion will reign, supreme;
then again — silence — final and deciding.
there are only remnants in the hallways,
the clutter of pencils, and crumpled papers,
to stand as a visual memorial to the year's work.
this will be quickly swept away.

quietly, the mind's eye roves from the hallway,
into the classroom.
here lie the same memorials;
but here, a sense of accomplishment still hangs
in the air,
accented by a broken formula upon the blackboard,
a question and its final answer.
were cluttered papers and broken pencils
the only evidence of a whole year's experience, the year would have been spent in vain.

the real treasures of the year are carried away inside someone's mind.
experiences — happy, sad, confused —
— but learning none the less.

left standing alone in the middle of the room
he scratched his head
and peered thoughtfully, sadly, over his glasses.
the bell had rung;
the students certainly went out faster than they had come in.
they left him standing there,
mouth still open trying to make the night's assignment.
he caught himself thinking back —
— was it only ten years ago he had come to this school?
wearily, he sat down at his desk,
cluttered with notes, the objective form of his dedication.
is it worth it? he thought for the hundredth time.
just then a student from his first period class walked in,
shyly, almost embarrassed.
he pulled up his shoulders,
not to be seen in his lonely dejected state.
“uh,” stuttered his student, “uh, i've been working ahead,
and i'm stuck on this problem.
do you have time to help me?”
he looked into the earnest eager face, laughed, much to the student's amazement,
and thought to himself, “he'll be a teacher someday.”

the road is long and seemingly dismal.
we approach a fork in the road,
with confusing signs pointing in all directions.
we stand at a place through which all things must pass.
the portion of the road which we've traveled was strewn with laughter, successes and sorrows.
big events stand as blinking lights in the distance passed, mapping a different life pattern
for each of us.

the many roads ahead of us are marked in glaring lights proclaiming the accomplishments of others who have passed along them, before our time.
some of us will go one way,
others will take a different road.
perhaps among us, there will be one,
who will strike out into the darkness
to carve his own road,
to light the first lights in a new direction.
it is here, at this point, we must part;
but not forever,
for the roads are interlacing,
crossing paths, where we will meet again, saying, “i know you from someplace. yes, you were with me, at the place through which all things must pass.”
